

Murder Casts a Long Shadow

I've often pondered with the idea of mixing both fact and fiction into a novel.

With 'Murder Casts a Long Shadow' I think I have succeeded in this quest.

DCS Bainbridge of Redcar and Cleveland Police is baffled by a series of murders, not only in his own Force area, but surrounding Force areas too. The only thing connecting the killings is the message written on the back of each victim's right hand, 'RIP', along with the date of their death.

I'm sure you, the reader, will be as intrigued with Bainbridge's findings as I was with researching and writing about them.